I think the expansion of the New York Film Critics.Q: Can I get the most recent row of a django gueryset? I've got a django model called Life with a model that says "I started life the day I was born". In a views.py in the same app, I have a queryset called Life.objects.all() that returns a queryset of all the lives that I have, sorted by birthdate. What I want is the most recent entry in this table. Can I do this without resorting to loading the data into a list, sorting the list, and then converting it back to a queryset? A: I have a queryset called Life.objects.all() that returns a queryset of all the lives that I have, sorted by birthdate. What I want is the most recent entry in this table. Can I do this without resorting to loading the data into a list, sorting the list, and then converting it back to a queryset? I don't think so, sorry. If you are asking for the latest record (this year in the example below), I suggest you just let Python do the sorting for you: >>>

MyModel.objects.filter(this_year=datetime.datetime.now()).order_by('this_year') [,...] If you need to sort by multiple fields, use values list(): >>> MyModel.objects.values list('this
